
Title: The Weapon Upstairs

Author: Zog Cabalists

Our friends, unlike their forefathers, the Gargoyles have joined us in interest over one of Exodous's creations. It was a structure unlike any other. A central housing for power. Solid ether waves. And it could be used without the necessary life. Completely mechanical. There is an intense safeguard installed on the monument. Once these grids are made into a closed circuit, the machine goes off. After a while the cabalist gather in Ver Lor Reg before a journey to the Power Core. Told, were we, that to place a rune in the main chamber of the machine, would create a powerhouse of ether. one that could fit in your hand, and even control the flow of ether by ether waves. Sound like something you know?

The Cannibal.

So after deep thought I, Cear, have decided to create a beacon to Xornite. I will use the newly constructed runes of ether flow to compress the ever so resistant mineral blackrock, with intruding ethereal waves! I will do this with the help of several Zog Cabalists. Once the power stored in the blackrock is infused there will be a managed release soaring high into the skys, splitting hundreds of feet o'er head. If aim is needed for any reason I, in my experience, would say that all one would need to do is, plant a noticable ammount of runes at the desired location. This should split the beam once it reached a high enough elevation.
